VILLAGE LIFE LE MOULIN

IN A WORD

In Lourmarin, Provence, across from the majestic castle, the old mill has been transformed into a charming boutique hotel, complete with a pool. This enchanting place serves as a meeting point for both locals and visitors. One can enjoy a coffee while listening to the bustling markets, cool off in the centrally located pool, explore picturesque trails by bike, and then return to the patio to savor a caillette or partake in the musical tea times at the Galinier.

The charm of the South is reflected in every room, adorned with straw or terracotta floors, plastered walls, and Provençal fabrics. Here, the decor is deliberately minimalist, allowing the authenticity of the village to shine through. From the windows, the view extends over the castle, rooftops, and winding streets of Lourmarin.

At the table, conviviality reigns, whether at Bacheto or the Commissions. Diners, both locals and visitors, gather around dishes that celebrate a Provence of sharing and beyond. Raw products are blended with more elaborate dishes, creating a mix of present and past, authenticity and sophistication.

Here, you can sleep, have lunch, shop, and relax, enjoy a glass of pastis, and play a game of pétanque. It's the perfect place to enjoy the serenity of time passing so peacefully in Provence.»

Whether you're deeply asleep, exploring the local countryside through the works of local authors, savouring regional delights on a platter, or immersing yourself in the artworks adorning the walls, this aesthetic provides unparalleled comfort in an elegant and welcoming setting.

In every space, be it the rooms, the bar, or the restaurant, you'll find a selection of books and artworks which cultivates a deep connection with the region.

The creators who have contributed to making Le Moulin a unique destination celebrate it in their own ways. Architects like Marine Delalay and Paula Alvarez de Toledo, furniture designers like Jérémie du Chaffaut, photographers like Gaëlle Tronquit, artists like Caroline Beauzon and Charlotte Culot, and musical agencies like Spectre, all bring their distinctive touch, contributing to making Le Moulin a haven of peace and refinement in the heart of Provence.

Finally, Delphine Rouvière, product manager at Beaumier, ensures the preservation of authenticity and the unique character of each establishment, thus perpetuating the heritage and tradition of the region.

MARINE DELALOY & PAULA ALVEREZ DE TOLEDO

« The location of Le Moulin in the heart of the village demanded that we open it up, to bring even more warmth and comfort to it. By adopting the norms of a southern vacation home, we focused on creating a domestic atmosphere rather than a typical hotel setting. »

LOCAL

Sagebrush tinged with grey-green, dry stone walls, avenues lined with lace-like cypress trees, scorching sun, icy rivers... The authenticity of the Luberon reveals itself at every turn. In the heart of its villages, especially in Lourmarin, weathered facades, stray cats, the Friday market, artist galleries, and bustling alleyways bear witness to real life.
